Tillamook County Cultural Plan: History of the TCCC

COUNTY OVERVIEW

This plan represents a picture of Tillamook County's cultural priorities. A dedicated group of Tillamook County citizens passionate about the cultural vitality of where they live, took on the work of understanding their county and its residents – a population diverse in age, socioeconomic status, life experience and points of view. The group was self-directed to answer the question: "What role does culture play in a rural, rugged, frontier county?" The county population is 25,000.

Opening up a conversation about culture takes on an interesting spin in a county whose geography is long and narrow: 74 miles long; whose weather is dramatic: 100+ inches of rain per year; and whose population mix ranges from heritage farmers (100+ years on a farm) to an influx of retirees. This makes for distinct differences in the three aspects of the county: north, central and south. Further, minimal county-wide media makes communication a challenge: one weekly newspaper published in the county seat, one bi-weekly newspaper published in the north county and one in south county, one long-established radio station followed by two new stations with reception that is spotty at best. In addition, Tillamook County is subject to the vagaries of a tourist economy.

THE INITIAL CULTURAL PLANNING COMMITTEE

Upon receiving word of the Oregon Cultural Trust's request in 2002 that each county create a Cultural Coalition and Cultural Plan, representatives of several entities stepped forward. At a County Commissioner's meeting, Carol Brown of the Tillamook County Pioneer Museum, Randall Koch from Sitka Center and Kathleen Ryan from Tillamook County Arts Network were appointed by the Commission to begin the work. This group then invited Tillamook County residents to a series of preliminary information meetings about the Trust's plan. To reach the largest number of residents, a combination of press releases and direct mailings was used. Direct mailings went to arts, heritage and humanities organizations; all known artists; and schools, churches and granges.

From these meetings a core group of individuals met for one year to discover the priorities of the people who live and work in Tillamook County. To get a picture of the county and its current priorities, the group gathered tools such as census data, the Tillamook County Futures Council 5-year plan and other empirical documents to assist in a greater understanding of the local population.

PLANNING METHODS & PRIORITIES

A survey was created and distributed widely through the schools, churches, farming community, social clubs, service groups, fishing and hunting enthusiasts, granges, as well as Hispanic students and at hosted dinners or teas with neighbors. The intention of the survey was to reach the heart of why people choose to live in Tillamook County and what is important to them. The group wanted to find out how locals view culture and its role in society. The survey allowed participants to dream of how they would allocate grant money. And finally, the planning committee wanted to know what people felt were Tillamook County's "Vanishing Treasures."

Seven key questions were asked over the course of several months to hundreds of respondents. The answers were compiled and distilled to create a set of five broad priorities for the initial cultural plan. The priorities will allow for a fair distribution of funds based on the tabulated desires of the community. In order of importance the priorities are as follows:

1. EDUCATION: To support projects relating to cultural education in grades K-12 and the community at large.
2. COMMUNITY ARTS: To support projects relating to an annual county wide cultural event.
3. HERITAGE: To support projects relating to the documentation and preservation of the history of commercial, residential, and public structures, Native and traditional cultures, and origins of the fishing, farming, and lumber industries.
4. ENVIRONMENT: To support projects relating to the protection of public open space, natural beauty, and ecosystems.
5. TRADITIONS: To support projects relating to locally produced foods and traditional arts (i.e. quilting).

TILLAMOOK COUNTY'S CULTURAL INVENTORY

Tillamook County's main ingredient is its stunningly beautiful environment evidenced by the number of county and state parks, national refuge and research areas. With a non-native population dating back 150 years, Tillamook County also has its share of historic structures, stories and artifacts and has no shortage of books written about this bountiful county. There is a notable lack of information about native populations, which points to a distinct vanishing piece of the local history.

KEY ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE COALITION

The Tillamook County Cultural Coalition faced a number of challenges in its early years. There was turnover in the membership of the coalition itself, which did not give us the constant pool of members needed to keep the work going. We still struggle with our split population, composed of people who live in the county full-time and those who maintain second homes here.

However, even with grant funds that was less than initially expected, our coalition has made a difference in the county. We have awarded a number of small grants, including a significant percentage to support cultural programs for area youth. We have not done formal surveying regarding ultimate outcomes of our investment, but it is accurate to say that many of the youth-oriented programs we funded would not have occurred without the grant funds from the Cultural Trust through the coalition.

CONCLUSION

Tillamook County Culture Coalition (TCCC) encompasses a wide variety of lifestyles, heritage, traditions and priorities. Yet in that diversity there are some common threads that run through the community. The people of Tillamook County deeply appreciate the natural beauty of this area, and its wealth of natural resources. Much of the area's industry and recreation is directly tied to the land and water. There exists a quiet pride among citizens who have chosen to live here, with the rain and wind in this "land of many waters."

Tillamook County's soul is in its people and its environment – both are equally important to all who live here. The coalition foresees the birthing of creative projects throughout the county, which will enhance the quality of an already unique place to live. Currently, the "creative" population is growing monthly as evidenced by the continuing influx of people who are registering with the Tillamook County Arts Network directory.

The Initial Cultural Planning Process

Our planning process began in 2002 when the Oregon Cultural Trust requested that every County and federally-recognized Indian Tribe in Oregon develops a cultural plan identifying local cultural priorities, strategies, and the structure of a local cultural coalition. This Tillamook County Cultural Coalition will be responsible for distributing Community Cultural Participation Grant program funds from the Oregon Cultural Trust.

Members of the Tillamook County Arts Network (TCAN) and Sitka Center for Art and Ecology along with the Tillamook County Pioneer Museum appeared before the County Commissioners in May of 2002. The Pioneer Museum took responsibility as fiscal agent for the coalition and members of TCAN became the nucleus of an ad hoc planning committee.

Flyers, posters, press releases and email communications were used to make the public aware of this new group, inviting participation in two informational meetings in September 2002. Once held, planning process meetings were scheduled. Individuals representing both the public and private sector attended the first two meetings in October. From these meetings, a formal coalition was established with 14 names forwarded to the County Commissioners.

The group decided the best way to find out what people care about in Tillamook County was to define seven key questions. These open-ended questions would be the basis for conversations in a variety of settings: informal one-on-one, presentations to groups, small teas held in people's homes, email interviews or as a questionnaire to be returned by mail or fax.

Members of the coalition defined target groups to provide input. The coalition believed that in this way it could reach a representative portion of the population.

The seven key questions included:

1. What do you value about Tillamook County?
2. What are meaningful traditions in your life?
3. How do you share traditions with others?
4. What is culture?
5. How does your heritage influence what you do for a living?
6. If you had $10,000 to spend on your community, how would you use it?
7. Who or what are the Vanishing Treasures of Tillamook County?

Over the next twelve weeks, members of the coalition took these seven questions out into their lives, presenting to groups, holding conversations over dinner, using email, interviewing people at events as well as asking themselves these questions.

The group was diligent in its inclusion process by reaching out to youth, farmers, business people, artists, fishermen, hunters, retirees, families and community leaders. The answers were discussed by the group, compiled and distilled. Recurring themes were used as the basis for setting priorities for the final plan.

In October 2004, the planning committee worked out the details of a structure for the Cultural Coalition, a job description for Coalition members, Granting Guidelines and a process for distributing funds.

With the plan in place and approved, and the first round of Coalition member names forwarded to the Trust, the committee had the great pleasure of organizing a community “coming out party” for the plan. The celebration for the plan and our cultural heritage was held at the Tillamook County Pioneer Museum where grant guidelines were available and members of the planning committee answered questions about the Cultural Trust license plate and cultural tax credit.

The Coalition updated the cultural plan in the summer of 2008 with a summary of work accomplished to date and more complete benchmarks.

The cultural plan including the grant application was again updated in May 2013. A plan edit and update is considered and conducted each year.

Tillamook County Cultural Plan Cultural Resources Inventory

ASSESSMENT PROCESS

Creation of the skeleton for the cultural inventory was assisted by Lincoln County's model. This was combined with TCAN's extensive directory – a project funded by the Northwest Oregon Economic Alliance. The planning committee worked on researching the historical and heritage inventory and the TCAN directory information was merged to give a complete picture of who is participating in the arts on all local levels.

Stunning findings of the inventory shows a wealth of historical publications, historical sites and structures. An even greater illumination reveals equal weight among the number of natural landmarks, state and county parks, national research and refuge areas, designated trails, camps and the abundance of arts and humanities. Industry is sandwiched between these extremes. For a county with a population of 25,000, this is significant news. Festivals and celebrations abound and a distinction can be made between those designed to attract tourists and those well loved by the locals.

The current inventory (2018) follows below.

Tillamook County Cultural Plan
PRIORITIES, STRATEGIES, QUANTITATIVE BENCHMARKS
& QUALITATIVE INDICATORS OF SUCCESS

PRIORITY #1: EDUCATION

To support cultural education projects benefiting students in grades K-12 and the community at large. As this is the highest priority for the county, the coalition will support collaborative projects that meld both existing and new educational opportunities.

Strategies: The Coalition will seek grant proposals for cultural activities that will:

- Create more avenues for volunteerism in schools.
- Create after school or weekend cultural programs that allow children opportunities to explore the arts, humanities and history.

PRIORITY #2: COMMUNITY ARTS

Tillamook County is 74 miles long and has three distinct communities based on school district boundaries. Residents value the feeling of community and events to celebrate our culture of the county. The Coalition seeks to create more opportunities for artists and to support efforts by individuals and organizations to share and join their talents to create cultural events and/or traveling exhibits.

Strategies: The Coalition will seek grant proposals, possibly organized around school district boundaries for cultural activities that will:

- Encourage collaboration between individuals and/or organizations that result in community cultural events.

 - What did you learn about our county's heritage?
 - What did you enjoy about this project?

PRIORITY #4: ENVIRONMENT

Tillamook County is known for its scenic beauty. It is the natural beauty that brings people to this place. Celebrating natural beauty through the arts can help increase awareness to keep our forests, rivers and undeveloped land preserved and pristine. The Coalition is interested in supporting cultural projects relating to Tillamook County's open space, natural beauty, beaches, forests, lakes, rivers, bays and ocean, mountains, and wildlife.

Strategies: The Coalition will seek grant proposals for cultural activities that will:

- Nurture appreciation of the natural world that surrounds us by exploring the influence our environment has on artistic expression and lifestyle.

- Educate residents and visitors about the wildlife populations and habitats of our coastal and inland communities.

Quantitative Benchmark:

- New or expanded efforts for public / private partnerships for the preservation and stewardship of lands and waterways, measured by the number of new efforts underway and ongoing through the coalition.

Qualitative Indicators of Success:

- Attitudes of the participants of successful grant projects on issues of the arts and the environment measured through audience response cards or an alternative format the applicant devises, which asks some or all of the following questions.
 - Have your feelings and attitudes about the importance of protecting the unique environment of Tillamook County changed as a result of viewing or participating in this experience?
 - Was the culture and environmental experience a positive one?
 - Did the experience give you a sense of increased stewardship of the unique environment of the county?
 - What did you learn about our county's environment?

PRIORITY #5: TRADITIONS

This priority relates to Tillamook County's legacy to local foods and traditional arts and crafts such as quilting. The Coalition seeks to celebrate traditions that build and strengthen sustainable communities.

Tillamook County Cultural Coalition

Granting funds locally for the Oregon Cultural Trust

2021 TCCC GRANT GUIDELINES

Deadline for Applications: November 20, 2020 (5pm PST)

All required application materials must be submitted by e-mail
 In one complete PDF document addressed to the TCCC Chairperson at:
tillamookccc@gmail.com

BACKGROUND

The Tillamook County Cultural Coalition (TCCC) was formed and developed its cultural plan, approved by the Oregon Cultural Trust, in 2004. It uses funds from the Trust to grant monies to cultural programs in Tillamook County. The citizens of Tillamook County set these priorities for cultural projects:

- Education
- Community Arts
- Heritage
- Environment
- Traditions

We encourage you to read the entire TCCC plan available on the Tillamook County Pioneer Museum website, Tillamook County Cultural Coalition tab, www.tcpm.org/tccc.htm.

The TCCC first awarded cultural grants in Tillamook County in 2006. Each year the TCCC receives funds from the Oregon Cultural Trust. The state of Oregon enacted legislation in 2002 (ORS 359.431) to become one of the first states in the nation to establish a cultural funding program, the Oregon Cultural Trust. The Trust, by statute, works to:

- Protect and stabilize Oregon cultural resources, creating a solid foundation for the future;
- Expand public awareness of, quality of, access to, and use of culture in Oregon;
- Ensure that Oregon cultural resources are strong and dynamic contributors to Oregon's communities and quality of life.

Each year one-third of Trust monies go to County Cultural Coalitions. Coalitions, in turn, grant those funds to local cultural programs or projects. To learn more about the Trust, go to www.culturaltrust.org

ELIGIBILITY

Grant applicants must:

- Be an individual(s), a non-profit organization or a governmental organization (organization must have a registered headquarters within Tillamook County).
- Be a resident of Tillamook County, if an individual.
- Maintain a registered headquarters in Tillamook County, if an organization.
- NOT benefit only the organization's members or adherents.
- NOT propagandize or otherwise attempt to directly influence elections or legislation.
- NOT request funds for on-going operations. TCCC funds may not be used to fund salaries, but funding may be available for project-specific contract positions.

EVALUATION CRITERIA

Grant proposals must:

- Address at least one of the five priorities established by the TCCC plan (if the plan addresses one or more of these priorities, it is likely to score better).
- Identify and explain the need for this proposal.
- Benefit a defined wide audience in Tillamook County.
- Identify and describe the audience to be served.
- Identify plans to promote the project.
- Describe how the public will access the project once completed.
- Be clear, specific and identify planned results -- what is expected to be accomplished.*
- Be specific in identifying the strategies to be used to get to the results. *
- Identify measurements by which you will know you have achieved targeted results. The TCCC Plan calls for two kinds of measurements: quantitative benchmarks and qualitative indicators of success.

- Provide a project budget summary and budget detail (including in-kind and other funding sources).

- Please review your applications carefully before sending. Incomplete applications will be disqualified.

* See the TCCC Cultural Plan

RESULTS, STRATEGIES

Grant applicants need to be clear and specific about the results expected. While process is important, TCCC needs to know exactly what applicants expect to accomplish with grant funds. In describing the project, applicants will identify the strategies to be employed to accomplish the goals.

Sample Results. The XYZ Project will:

- Produce two (one spring, one fall) all-school concerts that take place during school assemblies.
- Take the concerts to two other schools (one per school), and
- Offer the concerts in two evening programs for parents and the community.

Sample Strategies. (There could be a lot more strategies on this one project.)

- The XYZ Project will engage 3 classes of students (about 60-75 students) to produce the concerts from beginning to end.
- The XYZ Project will engage two other schools and school district support to take the concerts to two different schools.

QUANTITATIVE BENCHMARKS, QUALITATIVE INDICATORS OF SUCCESS

Quantitative Benchmarks are measurements that can be counted.

For example:

- 10 students were involved in producing the concerts.
- 25 people were involved in performing the concerts.
- 600 people attended the school concert(s) across all performances.
- 6 school teachers and administrators will work with students in the production of the concerts.

Qualitative Indicators of Success have to do with things we know have happened but are difficult to measure since they cannot be “counted.”

For example:

- How did participants feel? Feedback and testimonials from participants
- Was the experience positive and why?
- What did you learn and what would you do differently?

The Oregon Cultural Trust and TCCC want to make sure that applicants and project managers keep in mind the targeted Qualitative Indicators of Success throughout the period of the project. Both the Mid-Term Project Report and Final Project Report should describe the success of the project, in part, with quantitative and qualitative Indicators of Success.

Tillamook County Cultural Coalition - Grant Application Budget Detail

In addition to the Budget Summary Form, please include a narrative of project budget details here. Please Note: Both budget forms are required for your project to be considered. Do not include your organization's annual budget information.

For example – if someone (contract position only, not regular salaried employee) is being paid for services, indicate hourly rate and number of hours. If equipment is being purchased, provide actual quotes showing exactly what the equipment is and costs (with source included). Explain how equipment will be maintained, sustained, and upgraded to ensure the sustainability of the project (if appropriate). If materials are being purchased, provide a list of specific materials and associated cost information.
